Strength in Phi Eta Sigma Student Leadership

by Molly M. Lawrence

Grand President

Student leadership is a key issue for collegiate student organizations. Whether or not a campus organization has strong student leaders often determines how active and effective that organization may be.

Phi Eta Sigma has been fortunate over the years in having innovative student leaders both in its local chapters and at the national level. Since the first Phi Eta Sigma national convention in 1928, student members have met with advisers and national officers to conduct the business of this elite honor society. In recent years, student members attending national conventions have been responsible for changes in scholarship application policies and for initiating the national philanthropy project.

At the 1970 Louisiana State University convention, delegates voted to amend the Society's Constitution and Laws to add one student member to the national Executive Committee. They elected Larry Jones of Southern Illinois University, who served on the Committee until the Golden Anniversary Convention in 1973 at the University of Illinois. At the Auburn University convention in 1974, the Constitution was again amended to increase the number of student members on the Executive Committee to two. With another amendment to the governing document in 1980, the University of Florida convention voted to elect three students to the Executive Committee.

The 2012 convention in Salt Lake City elected three hard-working, highly productive students to the Executive Committee: Sarah Fortney (IUPUI), Sean Freeman (Florida State), and Jennifer Vuia (Texas A&M). These bright leaders helped select Charleston as the site of the 2014 convention and plan the convention activities. They researched educational programs in the area and recommended WINGS for Kids as the local beneficiary of the 2014 philanthropy. They also continued the tradition of conducting the convention's leadership workshops on topics that were relevant to convention attendees. This group of student leaders took the initiative to create, organize, and implement the Society's first convention Quiz Bowl, an event that was well received by participants and audience members alike.

At the final business session of the 2014 national convention, student delegates elected three new student members to the Executive Committee. Congratulations to Alex Belisle (Boise State), Taylor Bernosky (Monmouth), and Jamie Weihe (Stephen F. Austin), who will serve on the Committee through the 2016 convention. I look forward to meeting them and working with them over the next two years.

Although I was unable to attend the 2014 Phi Eta Sigma convention (only the second I have missed in thirty years), I understand the chapter delegates and other student leaders freely expressed their concerns and opinions on certain topics during the meetings. This type of debate is the result of the Society's democratic governance and the leadership shown by the student members. May we continue to encourage and facilitate such open discussions and the sharing of ideas and opinions among Phi Eta Sigma's strong student leaders.

Are You a Founders Fund Scholar?

by Elaine J. Powell

Executive Director

The Constitution and Scholarship Committee at the 2014 national convention deliberated constitutional changes to improve the scholarship program. (From left) Committee members pictured are Sean Freeman as committee adviser (Florida State), Jessica Lim Sang (Kennesaw State), Mary Jo Custer as committee adviser (Syracuse), Callie Thackeray (Brigham Young), Heather Harris (Florida State), Amna Sohail (IUPUI), Danielle Cassady (Alabama), Reginald Jordan (Georgia Southern), Valdrin Berisha (Syracuse), Lauren Gaona (Texas A&M), Andrew Stone (Boise State), Mark Molinaro (North Georgia-Gainesville), and Kierra Evans (Morgan State).

At a recent university event on a largely commuter campus, I discussed with students and administrators their challenges concerning member involvement in Phi Eta Sigma. One administrator expressed her opinion that the commuter population was no excuse for a lack of involvement in chapter activities.

This discussion reminded me that each chapter is unique, and each Phi Eta Sigma member is an individual with unique talents and abilities.

Although a chapter may have only a few members and may hold only one or two events each semester, its members are significant in the life of Phi Eta Sigma. A single chapter member can motivate others to perform service and leadership activities. Even if group projects are not feasible or practical, a few individual members can be involved by assisting the chapter adviser in recruiting and inviting new members, as well as organizing and preparing for the next induction ceremony.

In addition to recognition for academic excellence, Phi Eta Sigma members have the opportunity to be rewarded for their hard work. In 2014, the Society's Founders Fund again provided nearly $300,000 in scholarships and awards to superior student members who took the time to prepare outstanding applications. The members who received these funds attend colleges and universities of all sizes and demographics across the U.S. Those recipients have diverse majors in the sciences, the humanities, business, and education. Their backgrounds are as varied as their goals for the future. But what they all have in common is their academic success and their involvement in Phi Eta Sigma.

The national scholarship selection committee is comprised of Executive Committee members Mary Jo Custer, Tony Kemp, and Tim Lemper. These national leaders follow the selection criteria set forth in the Society's Constitution and Laws. They truly enjoy reading the scholarship applications, learning about the accomplishments and goals of Phi Eta Sigma members, and hearing about the different activities and programs in which those members participate. [For more information about the scholarship program, see the Scholarship News section of this issue of the Forum or visit the national website www.phietasigma.org]

At the 42nd National Convention and Leadership Workshops last October, convention delegates voted to amend the Constitution and Laws to increase the number of applications each chapter may submit to the national competition for undergraduate scholarships. The amendment allows every chapter to submit at least two undergraduate applications, with chapters inducting 300 or more members in the previous academic year submitting one additional application for each increment of 300 new members. [See the Convention Summary Report in this issue of the Forum for more details of convention actions.]

Sadly, not every chapter nominates applicants for undergraduate scholarships. Some larger chapters that are eligible to nominate four or five applicants may only have one or two students to apply. The members of the scholarship selection committee would gladly welcome a greater number of applications to review. But it is up to each individual member to apply.

As I often say to new inductees, "What about you? Are you a potential Founders Fund scholarship recipient?" Phi Eta Sigma has funds available to help you reach your educational goals. Let me encourage you to continue to excel in your studies; demonstrate initiative and creativity in your academics, your work, and your co-curricular and extra-curricular activities; stay involved with your Phi Eta Sigma chapter; and take advantage of any opportunity to participate in the Society at the regional and national levels. If you adhere to these admonitions in your higher education lifestyle, you could be an excellent candidate for selection as a Phi Eta Sigma Founders Fund scholarship recipient.

MCKENDREE UNIVERSITY

Lebanon, Illinois

April 24, 2014

Established in 1828 by pioneer Methodists, McKendree is the oldest college in Illinois. First called "Lebanon Seminary," the institution's name was changed in 1830, named for Bishop William McKendree, the first American-born bishop of the Methodist church, who later deeded 480 acres to help support the school. McKendree College officially became McKendree University in July 2007.

The university's mission is to provide a high quality education experience to outstanding students, guiding them in the pursuit of academic excellence, providing a rigorous, broadly based liberal arts curricula joined with specialization in a specific discipline. In light of its historical relationship with the United Methodist Church and its tradition of Judeo-Christian ideals, McKendree encourages an atmosphere of open dialogue, free inquiry, and mutual respect among students from diverse backgrounds. In addition to Phi Eta Sigma, McKendree also is host to other nationally recognized academic honor societies, including Kappa Delta Pi, Phi Alpha Theta, Phi Kappa Phi, Psi Chi, and Sigma Tau Delta.

The 378th chapter of Phi Eta Sigma was chartered at McKendree University on April 24, 2014. Chapter adviser Jennifer Miller gave opening remarks for the ceremony held in Bothwell Chapel. Dr. Joni Bastian, vice president for student affairs, introduced Executive Director Elaine J. Powell, who then presented the new chapter's charter to Dr. Bastian. Charter officers Stephanie Lake, McKenna Scaturro, Adam Strubhart, Halle Devoe, and Colin Rothzen performed the induction of the charter members. Ten members of the University's faculty and administration were recognized as honorary members. Following closing remarks from Dr. Collins, the new inductees attended a joint reception with members of The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi at the Hettenhausen Center for the Arts. An impressive 222 students became charter members of the McKendree University chapter of Phi Eta Sigma.

UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, LAS VEGAS

Las Vegas, Nevada

November 19, 2014

The University of Nevada, Las Vegas, located in the dynamic city of Las Vegas and surrounded by the Mojave Desert, has emerged as a premier urban university, established in 1957. Twenty-nine students were granted degrees at the university's first commencement ceremonies in 1964. Today, with nearly 28,000 students enrolled, UNLV is committed to offering a high-quality educational experience, strong research programs housed in modern facilities, and selected professional programs located on a well-landscaped 335-acre campus.

UNLV is one of the nation's most diverse campuses for undergraduate students, according to U.S. News & World Report, tied with two other universities at sixth place. The university offers more than 220 undergraduate, master's, and doctoral degree programs. Phi Eta Sigma joins The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi, Alpha Epsilon Delta, Psi Chi, and other national honor societies on the UNLV campus.

Phi Eta Sigma originally granted a charter to UNLV on May 3, 1999, with Ms. Kelly Kehlbeck serving as charter chapter adviser. For approximately six years, the chapter thrived with inductions of more than one hundred new members annually. After a few years without holding an induction, the chapter was declared inactive in 2009.

In early 2014, Ms. Ashlee Burrs, program coordinator for campus activities in the Office of Civic Engagement and Diversity, contacted Phi Eta Sigma to request information about reactivating the chapter. With Ms. Burrs' leadership and support from the university administration, Phi Eta Sigma rechartered the UNLV chapter on November 19, 2014.

Vice President for Student Affairs Juanita Fain gave welcoming remarks at the ceremony held in the Student Union Ballroom. Phi Eta Sigma Executive Director Elaine Powell spoke about the Society's history and opportunities for member involvement before presenting the UNLV charter to chapter president Jehoshua Josue and chapter vice president Michael Curtis. After the officers and chapter adviser Ashlee Burrs inducted the new chapter members, Mrs. Powell presented honorary memberships to Ms. Burrs and Dr. Fain. Following closing remarks by Ms. Burrs, the new inductees and their guests enjoyed a lovely reception.

2014 Chapter Activities, Projects, and Leadership

The Abilene Christian University chapter conducted its 27th induction ceremony on September 20, 2014 with record-breaking attendance. More than 300 students were inducted with more than 400 guests in attendance. This is the largest group of new members in the chapter's history.

The Bernard M. Baruch College chapter members hosted their first social event of the fall semester, "Lets Play, Game Day!" on September 4, 2014 at the Newman Vertical Campus at Baruch College. During the event, all students were invited to play a selection of board games including Taboo, Monopoly, Clue, and Uno. Students socialized in a relaxed setting and enjoyed some snacks. This event served as a wonderful opportunity for Phi Eta Sigma members to interact with incoming freshmen and spread the word about the honor society.

On September 18, 2014, chapter members of Phi Eta Sigma and Baruch's Women in Business co-hosted "Major Decisions." The purpose of this event was to give lower-division students insight on choosing a major in college. A panel of outstanding upper-division students assembled to share their experiences when choosing their majors. The panelists' majors included mathematics, political science, public affairs, and various business majors. The room was packed with eager students who listened intently as the panelists shared their journeys and gave a tremendous amount of advice about choosing a major. After the panelists spoke, the audience was given the opportunity to ask questions. This was extremely successful and helpful for the attendees.

One of the chapter's missions for this semester is to encourage more students to make a contribution to their community and help those in need. On September 21, 2014, the volunteer committee organized an event at Central Park, "Pitch in, Pick up." Central Park is one of the most famous attractions in New York City. With 843 acres and 40 million visitors annually, it is also one of the most difficult attractions to maintain; therefore, volunteers are essential for the maintenance of New York City's "backyard." Members used grabbers to pick up litter in their designated area. Chapter members take pride in their effort to the Park's conservancy and in giving back to their community.

Alex Belisle, Boise State University, meets one of the creatures at the South Carolina Aquarium during the national convention weekend.

The Boise State University chapter experienced a very positive, growth-oriented 2014. A new wave of members brought new passion and reinvigorated the leadership team. Throughout the spring semester, members participated in several service events benefiting the Idaho Foodbank, the Boy Scouts of America, and the annual Rake Up Boise. The Idaho Foodbank has worked for more than 30 years to eradicate food insecurity in Idaho. Chapter members were thrilled to continue their partnership with this incredible local non-profit. Similarly, Rake Up Boise gave members the opportunity to help out their senior and disabled neighbors by raking their yards after the winds of fall. The chapter capped a successful year with record attendance at its induction ceremony, paving the way for a very successful year ahead.

chapter redefined its vision and mission and committed to revolutionizing what it means to be an honor society today. Member events focused on improving the chapter's social activities, creating a family feel to the chapter, harkening back to the beginning of Phi Eta Sigma at the University of Illinois. The chapter members emphasized service and set a goal to create and sustain a chapter scholarship.

Throughout the semester, the chapter implemented unique events to recruit new members. To kick off the semester, members enjoyed a fun, casual outing of sand volleyball, with a game night the following week. Other events included a pumpkin carving and cupcake decorating competition, the annual Rake up Boise service event, a spikeball intramural tournament, and volunteering with a local animal shelter.

Goedhart, Hailey Plumb, Kyle Helms, and Alex Belisle, along with adviser Dr. Jeremy Ball, enjoyed a weekend of meeting and collaborating with leaders from chapters across the country. The Boise State chapter advocated for more collaboration between chapters throughout the year and for creating more scholarship opportunities. The delegation also witnessed the election of both the BSU student delegate, Alex Belisle, and chapter adviser, Jeremy Ball, to National Executive Committee positions, where they have the opportunity to continue the growth of Phi Eta Sigma nationally.

Overall, the chapter leaders are excited for continued growth in cultivating leaders, giving back to the community, and, ultimately, building passions.

Bowling Green State chapter members worked together to develop long-term and short-term goals.

Icebreaker events allowed BGSU members to get to know each other.

In their first general meeting of the year, Bowling Green State University chapter members discussed short-term and long-term goals as an organization. Some of these goals included becoming a close-knit community of members, maintaining a 3.0 GPA this year, providing social events for members, and many more! For newer members, the purpose of Phi Eta Sigma was explained and executive board members were introduced. Overall, it was a great way to start the year!

The chapter executive board members participated in a retreat at the BGSU Bowen Thompson Student Union. They were able to get to know one another better, learn the history, mission, and values of our great organization, as well as engage with guest speakers who shared incredible and valuable skills. Guest speakers included one representative each from the BGSU Service Learning Office, the Office of Campus Activities, and the Center for Leadership. The retreat was fun, engaging, and a great way to build connections with other executive board members.

Treasurer Rachel Reinhard led the second general meeting of the year. For this meeting members participated in several fun icebreaker activities. Some of these icebreakers included the human knot, arranging members by birthday and first name without talking, and more. These were great activities for members to get to know one another.

Members of the Brigham Young University chapter participated in a service activity by typing descriptions of images in textbooks to make the books accessible for blind and visually impaired students.

The Brigham Young University chapter of Phi Eta Sigma had a fantastic 2013-2014 academic year. The chapter continues to lead by providing service to the BYU campus and community, as well as by participating in social activities. At the beginning of the year, members served their local recreation center and helped prepare for its annual Halloween carnival. They also volunteered with Benetech Bookshare to assist in making textbooks more accessible to blind and visually impaired students. Participating members viewed images in various textbooks and typed descriptions of images, figures, and graphs. This service opportunity was directly related to the motto of Phi Eta Sigma, "Knowledge is Power." Other service opportunities included sending thank-you notes to professors and providing treats and notes of encouragement for freshmen during finals week.

The activities committee planned several exciting social events to help members become better acquainted with each other and to build teamwork. One activity members particularly enjoyed was when an adviser from the scholarship office discussed how to be the best candidate for scholarships and how to stand out among other applicants. This directly related to the chapter's mission of continued academic success and excellence. The executive committee utilized emails and the chapter's Facebook page to publicize events, which led to doubling activity attendance during the school year.

The 2014 induction ceremony was a highlight of the year when the chapter inducted an astounding 707 new members. This was the largest number to be inducted in one year in the history of the BYU chapter. Chapter leadership looks forward to having so many new members and hopes to continue to increase activity attendance.

The current academic year activities began with providing class schedule tours for freshmen during new student orientation. An entertaining social meeting with several get-to-know-you games was hosted to welcome everyone back to school for the semester. The executive committee enjoyed attending the 2014 National Convention in Charleston and meeting other members of Phi Eta Sigma from across the country.

Castleton College proudly inducted eighty-two new members this past year. New officers are Ally Brandland (president), Trevor Sayers (vice president), Brianna Morse (treasurer), Emma Blaiklock (secretary), and Chris Manjuck (student representative).

The Emory & Henry College chapter of Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society inducted fifty-eight students on October 3, 2014. This is the chapter's largest number of inductees since its chartering in spring 2010.

Phi Eta Sigma adviser and chair of political science Dr. Joseph Lane, chapter president Emily Carrier, and vice president Nathan Fishell presided over the ceremony.

New member Lauren Sapp said, “Today, I became one of the newest members of the Phi Eta Sigma Honor Society. I’m thrilled man, absolutely thrilled!”

The Florida Southern College chapter has hosted social events including pizza parties and ice cream parties, as well as philanthropic events such as writing letters to soldiers and making blankets for Project Linus.

Under the direction of its seventy-plus member leadership council, The Florida State University chapter experienced an eventful and productive 2013-2014 school year. After welcoming incoming students and their families at FSU's convocation ceremony, the members participated in homecoming activities, volunteered at community service events, and partnered with the Academic Center for Excellence to provide peer tutoring.

Momentum increased in the spring semester with the annual chapter membership drive, which was highlighted by a 5,000-letter stuffing party. Members capitalized on "PES Week" speaking at honors' colloquiums, tabling in the student union, distributing I♥ΦHΣ buttons, displaying enthusiasm during "Wear your PES Shirt Day," socializing at a Valentine-making party, and sharing organizational information at their annual "Black & Gold Affair." Both the Valentine party and the Black & Gold Affair gave prospective Phi Eta

The resulting recruitment of 1,004 new members was celebrated at the March 2014 induction ceremony with guest speaker, Dr. Darrin McMahon, author of Happiness: A History and Divine Fury: A History of Genius. contributions totaling $10,303 to the chapter endowment fund were announced. Funds will be used to provide a second $1,000 research award annually for Phi Eta Sigma members at Florida State University.

Other achievements include winning the championship title for the second consecutive year in FSU's Council of Honor Societies "Battle of the Brains," partnering with Advising First to offer summer peer advising, collaborating with the Dean of Students to establish an ongoing service to feed students in need, establishing a "Study Party" as a new tradition during finals week, launching a new website (fsuphietasigma.org), and creating a video to share member tips for success during the first year in college. The website includes a "newsfeed" feature, which keeps current and prospective members up-to-date on information about the chapter. The video will be shown summer 2015 during 23 orientation sessions for the University's 6,200 incoming first-year students.

In the upcoming year, the FSU chapter members especially look forward to celebrating their 60th Anniversary, inducting new members at their newly established first-year program in Panama City, and building plans and partnerships for a regional conference for 2015-2016.

The Indiana University chapter of Phi Eta Sigma kicked off 2014-2015 with numerous events around campus and throughout the local community. The community service committee volunteered at Ciderfest, an educational festival that teaches the Bloomington community about production of locally grown fruits. The social committee also participated in the JB5K Color Run to raise money for the Jill Behrman Emerging Leader Scholarship fund. Other chapter events include a resume workshop hosted by the professional/academic committee and a "Storm the Dorms" event hosted by the recruitment committee to raise awareness of Phi Eta Sigma on campus. The Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis chapter began the year with its annual Officers' Retreat at the Eagle's Hide-A-Way on September 7, 2014. Prior to the start of classes, forty members joined the Move Crew to assist with campus housing Move-in Day by helping students and parents unload and carry everything from crock pots to flat-screen televisions up the stairs of the Campus Apartments on the Riverwalk, as well as other locations, including the freshman residence hall The Tower. This was a great opportunity for members to connect with incoming freshmen and let them know about Phi Eta Sigma. During the IUPUI Weeks of Welcome JagFest, members set up a table in Taylor Courtyard to pass out flyers and give new students a chance to win prizes by throwing darts at a balloon wall and answering the IUPUI trivia questions inside the balloons. Members also set up a booth at the Student Involvement Expo to make IUPUI students aware of chapter activities, as well as the benefits of joining Phi Eta Sigma. That same week a booth was set up at the Honors College welcome since many current and potential members are IUPUI Honors College students.

Officer meetings and member meetings were held monthly. Speakers were scheduled for each meeting covering topics that included planning and executing a study abroad experience, lowering stress level with Counseling and Psychological Services, and how to become an OTEAM member with the Office of New Student Orientation.

On September 21, 2014 three teams from the chapter participated in the annual IUPUI Regatta, an all-day canoe race on the downtown canal that includes more than one hundred teams of faculty, staff, and students from IUPUI. Although the IUPUI Phi Eta Sigma teams did not win, they also did not end up upside down in the canal! The chapter teams did very well and had a great time. Members also shared a booth with the IUPUI Honors College along the canal and served up free popcorn to participants and visitors.

Many members participated in the IUPUI Day of Caring in September by partnering with a local organization called Faith, Hope and Love for a day of community service. Members engaged in community beautification by picking up trash, weeding, and cleaning up sidewalks, schoolyards, and various community spaces.

In addition to service projects, members spent a great deal of time promoting Phi Eta Sigma during the fall semester. Officers and members attended many first-year seminar classes to talk about the value and importance of joining Phi Eta Sigma. The officers also formed a committee to create a promotional video to encourage students to join. Members also attended the nine Student Organization Leadership Development (SOLD) Workshops required to maintain the chapter's status as one of the top-ranked organizations on campus.

In October, members arose before the sun came up to volunteer at the Indianapolis Marathon by parking cars and passing out water to the runners. That same weekend, the members helped out Indy Parks for the seventh year in a row with their annual Hauntless Halloween. Members worked with young children during this three-night event and served as trail guides, refreshment vendors, crafts assistants, pumpkin carvers, and campfire leaders. Members also had a social outing in October when they visited the very frightening Nightmare on Edgewood Haunted House in Indianapolis.

Also in October, the chapter was fortunate to have ten members attend the Phi Eta Sigma convention in the beautiful city of Charleston, South Carolina. Members made new friends, took some great photos, and came home with a ton of ideas they plan to implement with their chapter. The visit to Charleston was one they will never forget!

In November 2014 members volunteered at a local homeless shelter, the Wheeler Mission, during National Hunger and Homelessness

Awareness week. Other November events included volunteering at the Global Peace Initiatives farm at the county fairgrounds to help set up their solar panel system, windmill, and hydroponic system. Members also always volunteer at the Ronald McDonald House on campus by preparing breakfast for the guests whose children are patients at Riley Hospital for Children. For its annual holiday service in December, the chapter adopts local families through Community Centers of Indianapolis, a project in which members shop and wrap gifts to help the families have a happy holiday.

Spring semester will include participating in the annual IUPUI Martin Luther King, Jr. Day of Service in January, volunteering at Indianapolis Animal Care and Control, planning the March 29 initiation of new members, organizing the end-of-year picnic for all members, and hosting the annual SamStrong dance to honor former student Sam Featherstone and to raise money for pediatric cancer. Members also plan to attend an Indiana Pacers basketball game and an Indianapolis Indians baseball game.

The chapter congratulates two IUPUI members on their selection as recipients of national Phi Eta Sigma undergraduate scholarships this year: Greg Rothchild, former chapter president and current student adviser; and Sarah Fortney, last year's service chair, current student adviser, and Phi Eta Sigma national Executive Committee member. The chapter looks forward to winning more scholarships and awards in 2015!

The Kansas State University chapter of Phi Eta Sigma continues to focus on providing multiple service opportunities for members while striking a balance among honoring academic success, engaging in service, and enjoying social events. The chapter held its third annual Bowl-a-Thon, an event that raises money for the Terry C. Johnson Center for Basic Cancer Research at Kansas State. Members raised approximately $600, which will be used to support cancer research and provide undergraduate students with research opportunities.

Additionally, an Orange Leaf frozen yogurt fundraiser was held to raise money for chapter scholarships, which contributed to three scholarships awarded for the 2014-2015 academic year. The spring 2014 semester also featured a murder mystery social event, in which members enjoyed a stress relieving night before spring finals week. After inducting eighty new members on September 14, 2014, the Kansas State chapter leadership is excited that the growing membership has shown a correlation to the growing event participation, as members begin to grow and develop into their roles within Phi Eta Sigma.

The Kennesaw State University chapter kicked off a successful and productive year with a Welcome Back cookout for its members. The chapter also volunteered at First-Year Convocation, serving the campus by working the annual event that welcomes new students. Energized to demonstrate a commitment to service, more than seventy members collaborated with students from other honor societies throughout the year for card-making projects to uplift the spirits of deployed troops and local nursing home residents. The chapter also co-sponsored a human-trafficking awareness event and a free GRE test preparation session open to all students. Stressing the importance of members supporting each other through social interactions, chapter members hosted a Halloween activity, a tacky sweater holiday party, and ice cream socials. The chapter constructed and utilized a new website to provide online registration for new members, which yielded a record number of attendees at the March induction ceremony. [For more information on Kennesaw State, see the Feature Articles section of this issue.]

The Louisiana State University chapter hosted its annual Phi Eta Sigma induction ceremony on Tuesday, April 22, 2014, at LSU Student Union Royal Ballroom. The chapter inducted 115 freshmen scholastic achievers, and presented the L. B. Lucky Award and Senior Award. Since 1928, the LSU Chapter of Phi Eta Sigma has inducted more than 10,650 students.

"It is an honor and a privilege to serve as president of one of LSU's oldest societies," said Andrew Mahtook, 2013-2015 president of the LSU chapter of Phi Eta Sigma. "For over 85 years, Phi Eta Sigma has inducted some of the brightest minds to walk this historic campus. The tradition and excellence of LSU can be felt in each incoming freshmen class, and I take great pride in welcoming the best of those students into our respected chapter."

"Phi Eta Sigma is a well-respected honor society of which I am pleased to be the adviser for the LSU Chapter," said Paul Ivey, chapter adviser and executive director of LSU University College. "This year's induction of 115 students is one of our largest and is another means for University College to recognize the academic excellence of our freshmen."

Established in 1959, the L.B. Lucky Award recognizes a Phi Eta Sigma member who achieved the best overall academic performance during the first three semesters of work taken at LSU.

LSU member Rachel Anne Rhodes, 2014 L.B. Lucky Award recipient.

Rachel Rhodes received the LSU Phi Eta Sigma L.B. Lucky Award for 2014. Rhodes is pursuing her bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering with a minor in business administration, maintaining a 4.0 GPA. Rhodes is a member of the LSU Honors College, as well as a candidate for the Distinguished Communicator Certificate.

Established in 1992, the Senior Award recognizes a Phi Eta Sigma chapter member who is a graduating LSU senior and has maintained the best cumulative grade point average and overall academic record at LSU. Annelise Marie Annestrand was the 2014 recipient of the chapter's Senior Award. Annestrand will graduate with her bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering, maintaining a 4.0 GPA. Rhodes is a member of Delta Zeta Sorority, Tau Beta Pi (engineering honor society), American Institute of Chemical Engineers, Society of Women Engineers, Order of Omega (Greek leadership honor society), and Rho Lambda (PanHellenic leadership honor society).

"Phi Eta Sigma is pleased to recognize our outstanding sophomore and graduating senior members for their academic achievement," Ivey said. "These annual awards are an important part of our spring induction ceremonies and hopefully provide our newest members with inspiration to continue their academic excellence."

The University of Maryland, College Park chapter (Primannum Honor Society) inducted approximately 800 students on Sunday, April 27, 2014. The ceremony took place in Memorial Chapel, where inductees, parents, and current members listened to Dr. Guenzler Stevens, the director of campus life, speak on living adventurously and taking risks. A fundraiser at Ledo's Restaurant followed the event.

The Monmouth University chapter of Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society inducted 139 first-year students on Saturday, March 8, 2014, in Pollack Theater.

Golam Mathbor, adviser for the honor society, said the ceremony helps to reward and encourage superior scholarship among freshman after their first semester of college. "First semester of their first year at the University is a big transition from high school to university. Therefore, recognition of freshmen for their hard work and academic excellence makes them feel cared [for] by the institution they have chosen to pursue their higher education," Mathbor said.

Jackie Duvally, an inductee and undeclared freshman, said, "Being able to be a part of Phi Eta Sigma definitely gives me motivation to perform better during the rest of my time at Monmouth. Knowing the effort I put in during my first semester got me to this point, I know I will continue to work just as hard to keep my grades up."

Board Certified Protection Professional Vincent J. Bove, who is a leadership, character and security educator, spoke during the ceremony and explained that these students have the ability to "resuscitate" the nation. He provided examples of the many students around the U.S. who get involved with drugs, alcohol and violence, and he expressed that the students of Phi Eta Sigma can be the ones to change this course through their "character and academic achievement."

Rianna Rae, an inductee and international business major, said she enjoyed Bove's speech. "He really engaged the audience with his use of current, real world issues. I think it's very important to recognize that the world can be a better place and our generation can be the change the world needs." Rae continued, "I got chills seeing friends and family of inductees standing and applauding us knowing that they believe we, as inductees, can really make a difference on campus, in the local community, and in the world if we so choose."

Chapter historian Taylor Bernosky also spoke at the event, stating the three qualities she believes should be present in the new members: "a well-disciplined mind, a well-cared for body and an unimpeachable character." She said, "I believe that these three qualities together form a well-rounded person and someone that sets forth great examples for others."

Over the years at the University, the Phi Eta Sigma students have been contributing to the betterment of the school. "In the most recent years, the students have been quite active and have taken advantage of the University's resources. They have participated in Relay for Life, the Big Event, and other smaller scale volunteering opportunities," said Alexis DeCarvalho, chapter vice president.

Unfortunately, there has been a decrease in the number of inducted members in the past few years. "We had a smaller freshman class this year, so although the membership went from 230 to 175, the percentage of eligible students in relation to the first-year population remained the same," said Lisa Henry, office coordinator for First-Year Advising.

Regardless of this, Henry added that the society provides the students with different opportunities throughout their membership. "With this membership comes opportunities to be active within the Monmouth University chapter. It identifies them as having exceptional academic abilities to graduate schools and potential employers, and it gives the executive board members the chance to attend the national convention and leadership workshop," Henry said.

Mathbor expressed his hopes that students will continue to maintain academic excellence in their future careers. "The biggest takeaway the students receive is how to take care of each other, maintaining academic honesty, integrity, and becoming a person of character. As I said to new inductees, remember, character is your destiny," Mathbor said.

University of Nebraska at Kearney participated in two campus service projects last year. Members distributed treats to students on Halloween. They also participated in the campus-wide Big Event service project, in which teams of students go into the community and complete requested services. The chapter also continued holding book drives to support the literacy efforts of Better World Books across the globe.

The New Mexico State University chapter worked on fun and exciting projects that focused on community outreach to the campus and to the city of Las Cruces. Members are rewarded for active participation in weekly meetings. Events include guest speakers, socials, and presentations by members to promote better communication and public speaking skills.

In the fall semester, the chapter was involved with "Keep State Great" and "Halloween Howl." The chapter partnered with an organization called Groundwork Doña Ana for trail work at the Prehistoric Trackways National Monument, where they completed two miles of trail work. The Groundwork organization also helped the chapter with community service at local nurseries. Several new fundraisers were launched including "The Craving Games," a nerf war game full of action and "Show Your Colors," an art project in which NMSU students paint a 6 foot square canvas that is later auctioned. During the spring, the chapter participated in Relay for Life and The Big Event. "Love Grams" is another fundraising event in which members would sing and dance for selected campus couples on Valentine's Day. Other community service projects sponsored by the chapter were a canned food drive and the donation of clothing and toys to local shelters. The chapter also focused on encouraging members to apply for national Phi Eta Sigma scholarships and other scholarships. To close the year, members partnered with their sister honor society to organize the end-of-year formal.

The New York Institute of Technology chapter was very active with service projects this past year. The chapter sponsored a Bingo Night on campus in collaboration with other campus organizations. Members participated in the “Making Strides Against Breast Cancer” walk and raised $50 for the American Cancer Society. Members also volunteered at the Mary Brennan Inn Soup Kitchen. The chapter was able to donate 20 cans that were collected through an on campus can drive. Forty toys were donated to the Gerald J. Ryan Outreach Center as a result of a Christmas toy drive by the chapter. Members walked in the Relay for Life and raised $56 for the event.

The chapter hosted an alumni speaker event, featuring recent graduate and Phi Eta Sigma alumnus Parth Savani who shared with students about his path to success.

The members of Phi Eta Sigma participated in all three of this year's "canning weekends," during which Penn State students took to the streets and collected donations from drivers and pedestrians across the state of Pennsylvania as well as other nearby states.

The Pittsburg State University chapter members of Phi Eta Sigma take great pride in serving their community in many ways because community members do so much for the town and university. This year, the chapter chose a new community service event of volunteering at the Southeast Kansas Recycling Center in September. Members unloaded community members' vehicles and sorted the recyclables that were dropped off, chores that did not sound appealing at first. But in the end, all of the volunteers found the work enjoyable and appreciated the opportunity to give back to their community. Malory White, campus events chair, said, "I really enjoyed volunteering at the recycling center. I had never volunteered there before, and it was a unique experience. What made it enjoyable was knowing that we were benefiting the community by being there." Chapter vice president Lynzee Flores also gave positive feedback about her experience at the Recycling Center, saying, "I really enjoyed volunteering at the SEK Recycling Center because it is a good way to not only help the community, but the Earth as well. The people that work there are really nice too. I hope our chapter will be able to volunteer there more." As the executive team members and the community service chairs look ahead, there are already volunteer opportunities planned for members to serve the community, including participation in Safe Trick-or-Treat for school-aged children on Halloween, bell ringing for the Salvation Army, and cleaning at the Southeast Kansas Humane Society. The Phi Eta Sigma members who volunteer find great pride in knowing that they are giving back to those who give so much to them.

The University of Pittsburgh at Greensburg chapter always starts off the fall semester by staffing a table during the Student Activities Fair to inform freshman about the opportunities to get involved in the organization and to encourage current members to become more active in the Society.

Last October, the chapter sponsored the much anticipated "Oktoberfest" celebration (an event its members created in 2012), calling upon a dozen other honor societies and organizations to participate. Members collaborate with various student organizations to provide different activities, foods, drinks, games, and crafts during the celebration. Even though it rained during this outdoor event this year, many people spent the evening under tents carving pumpkins, drinking root beer floats, and making caramel apples.

In November, members held a Veterans Day luncheon, offering veterans on campus and in the local community a free meal for themselves and their families. Chapter members were grateful for the opportunity to thank the country's veterans for their service and spend some time talking to them and hearing their stories.

Last spring semester also yielded many opportunities for member participation, including the chapter's annual snow tubing event in February, which is open to the entire campus. It was a fun way to enjoy the snow and share information about Phi Eta Sigma.

Before the year was over, Phi Eta Sigma welcomed its newest inductees by involving them in the annual Creek-Clean-Up event. After a fun day of cleaning up the creek that runs through campus (and rescuing the occasional turtle),

The University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown chapter partnered with two local vendors to raise money for the Special Olympics, which holds its annual winter games in Johnstown, Pennsylvania. The fall semester partner was Sweet Frog, a local frozen yogurt shop; and O'Shea's Candy Bars was the spring semester vendor partner.

After Purdue University's spring induction ceremony and luncheon, more than thirty-five new initiates applied to be officers or committee chairs. Through an all-evening interview process with current officers, twenty-one new chapter leaders were chosen to plan and organize activities and service. Two officer transition events—one business and one social—were held to celebrate the successes of the 2013-2014 officers and launch a new year for the 2014-2015 officers.

Fall semester started off with a bang during the first two weeks of school when officers staffed informational booths for both the freshman orientation student activities and organizations fair and the Student Union Board Activities Bonanza.

The chapter strives to host at least one service activity each month that will also benefit members. Members publicized the organization on campus by participating in the homecoming parade and creating a spirit window painting for homecoming week. The chapter's first all-member meeting included a speaker from the Study Abroad Office, icebreakers to help members get better acquainted, and crafting lollipop ghosts to distribute to students studying the week of Halloween. Other service projects include participating in Boo at the Zoo, yard clean ups for elderly persons during winterization, and Make a Difference Day.

Chapter officers Iris Liang and Christopher Gonya and adviser Susan Melson Huffman traveled to Charleston, South Carolina and enjoyed participating in the 2014 national convention. Many ideas were shared with students and advisers from chapters all over the country, and the Purdue representatives enjoyed a great time at the event.

A fall informational session and fall induction ceremony and reception were held in November. This smaller induction provides a nice "dress rehearsal" before the very large one held in March. The Purdue chapter experienced a great year in 2014, and members look forward to the many ways they can contribute to their campus and community in the coming year!

The Syracuse University chapter adopted Strides Against Breast Cancer as their annual fundraiser. Chapter members participated in the 2.5-mile walk in downtown Syracuse on October 19, 2014, and raised more than $500. One method used to raise money was selling breast cancer awareness wristbands. This allowed members to get involved by tabling and showcasing Phi Eta Sigma to students all over campus. Members continued fundraising through December, which included raffling a goody basket at the induction ceremony in November. In addition, members are excited to implement a few new ideas brought back from the national convention in Charleston. The chapter also hosted a blood drive in the student center, which was a great opportunity for members to volunteer. In addition to these events, members plan to have a movie night/ice cream social, Clean Up Cuse, Otto Thon, and more!

The University of Tennessee chapter is once again thriving. Chapter historian Diamond Doss, with co-historians Cynthia Nkem and Kaila Smith-Casey, worked hard to document the year's events via a scrapbook and tri-fold poster used for outreach events. A 12-member officer team and 576 new members inducted are both the largest in chapter history.

The chapter holds monthly meetings to allow members to connect. The officer team worked hard to create themes for each of the monthly meetings. Chapter treasurer Maggie Henderson provided an awesome presentation on study habits to help members as they prepared for finals. Chapter president Hans Wangsness led an excellent meeting informing members about the International House on campus and how to get involved with cultural organizations.

Service opportunities for members are very important for this All Vol chapter. The chapter's service coordinator Emily DiAngelo and co-service coordinators Cindy Anku and Paige Winters sponsored terrific events all year long. One of the most popular events for Phi Eta Sigma member participation was Boo at the Zoo. This is an annual fundraiser for the zoo and a safe environment for Knoxville locals to trick or treat. Other events included YWCA Closet, Girls Night Out with the Boys and Girls Club, and a visit to a local nursing home.

Another semi-annual event Phi Eta Sigma hosts to serve the campus community is Study Break, which is open to all students and faculty and gives attendees a chance to relax before finals week begins. The chapter provides free food, coffee, and school supplies with a movie showing.

UT members enjoy refreshments after the induction ceremony.

Incoming officers for the current school year include co-presidents Jamie Dreher and Xander Thumler, secretary Ashley Fontenot, and public relations coordinator Anna Kegley. With such big events and milestones the chapter achieved last year, the chapter has even bigger plans for the coming year.

The University of Tennessee at Chattanooga chapter collected warm clothing items such as gloves, hats, and blankets to distribute for the homeless in the community in November 2014.

Tennessee members Courtney Adams, Corinne Grimm, and Laura Williams prepared for Study Break.

The Texas A&M University chapter has 3,500 members and hosts many events each semester. Therefore, the chapter instituted an “active” member policy whereby members must attend at least two out of three meetings, one social event, and one service event each semester in order to be eligible to wear Phi Eta Sigma honor cords at graduation.

So far this semester, members have hosted a street cleanup and back to school game night, and they participated in a 5K run to support and raise awareness for those families with babies born prematurely or critically ill. Additionally, more than 300 members had dinner at a local restaurant to participate in a profit share that raises money for scholarships provided by the chapter. Last semester, three of the most active members each earned a $250 chapter scholarship funded by chapter profit shares. Phi Eta Sigma members also offer a free tutoring program for students at A&M. The tutoring and scholarship programs are both expanding continually, and members are very excited about the progress they are making.

Members also hosted a Harry Potter theme dinner to raise money for the national Phi Eta Sigma philanthropy, WINGS for Kids. The chapter raised $500 for WINGS and received the Society’s 2014 award for “Best Philanthropy” for their Harry Potter theme dinner. Four members and the chapter adviser represented the Texas A&M chapter at the 2014 national convention in Charleston. The members who attended are looking forward to incorporating new strategies and activities learned at the convention. For the chapter’s local philanthropy, members chose to work with Boys and Girls Club, dedicated to helping youth become better individuals. Chapter leaders try to offer as many events as possible to accommodate the members’ busy schedules and provide each member many opportunities to participate as much as they wish. The chapter invited 1,350 students to be inducted in the fall semester.

The University of Utah chapter inducted more than 150 new members in 2014. At their spring induction banquet, members and guests enjoyed an inspiring keynote address about student involvement by Courtney McBeth, associate director of the Hinckley Institute of Politics and director of Global Internships for the university.

It was a year of growth and development with the establishment of the chapter's executive board and leadership council and three new annual events to promote leadership, learning, service, and social engagement. As a result of participation and advocacy by new member and vice chair of the budget and fundraising committee Natasia Crowe, the chapter has received funding for the first time from the Associated Students of the University of Utah. Their support will not only cover costs of upcoming events, but will also increase visibility of the organization in the campus community.

Committees of the leadership council and officers of the executive board collaborated to sponsor a service activity with the chapter's annual Halloween social. At the suggestion of chapter president Corinne Galland, Phi Eta Sigma members made Halloween cards for patients at Primary Children's Hospital, the chapter philanthropic beneficiary. In November the chapter hosted "Warm Your Hearts," a social and service event at which members enjoyed hot chocolate while making fleece blankets or arts and crafts bags for Primary Children's Hospital. The chapter also plans to make last year's Valentine Sweet Social and Body Language Workshop, with local consultant Merrie Hudson, an ongoing fun tradition. This is an event at which potential new members learn about Phi Eta Sigma, meet officers and current members, and learn useful information about what their body language conveys to others.

Virginia Commonwealth University raised $460 for Phi Eta Sigma from a Chipotle fundraiser in late September. The chapter held a mason jar loose change drive, raising $70 for the WINGS for Kids national philanthropy and $70 for the local chapter of SCAN (Stop Child Abuse Now). The chapter was represented at national convention by chapter adviser Mary Denney and service/social chair Allison Beckmann.

The Wartburg College chapter of Phi Eta Sigma inducted sixty-eight new members on September 27, 2014 with family and faculty guests in attendance. Chapter members were active in the 2013-2014 academic year. Social events included a cookie decorating party in December, a Candlelight Dinner in January, and the Dean's List reception in February. Chapter members joined in community service events for Blankets of Love in January, Recycl'Olympics in March, and Cans for a Cause in May.

University of Wisconsin-Green Bay chapter finished the 2013-2014 academic year with the induction of ninety new members, cards4vets, highway cleanup, and a year end party at Lambeau Cottage! Kickoff to the 2014-2015 academic year began with a slate of six new officers guided by two returning senior advisers. The first big event was The Morgue, a haunted house fundraising experience. Five officers traveled to national convention in Charleston, where the chapter was awarded a certificate for participation in the national philanthropy project. The chapter fundraised for the national philanthropy with a special event Battle of the Bands: Rockin' for a Reason! The board is busy slating upcoming events to include Culver's Night, Battle of the Bands, bell ringing for the Salvation Army, and more. Mark your calendars as the chapter leaders eagerly plan for another Midwest Area Regional Conference to be held in October 2015. Kennesaw State University Chapter Projects Yield “Golden 0’s”

by Jeremy Hudak, 2014-2015 Chapter President and Yelena Kozenkova, 2012-2013 Chapter President

The beating hum of helicopter blades projected across the Campus Green of Kennesaw State University. Hundreds of faces turned up in awe to witness the helicopter’s descent. The firefighters were quick. They have done this numerous times before. Jumping out of the blue and white hospital helicopter, Cobb County firefighters and EMTs rushed to the scene of a fatal car crash. Bloodied bodies were wedged between the rubble of metal and glass from the head-on collision of a dark green SUV and a gray four-door sedan. Emergency personnel pried the roof and doors of the cars open to drag injured victims out. One KSU student had to be flown to the county hospital. White cloths covered motionless bodies, which were scooped up onto stretchers beside the fire truck.

This horrific scene on the Kennesaw State campus could have been real; fortunately, this time it was only a simulation of a fatal car accident, utilizing actual emergency responders in the scene. The “victims” were student actors participating in National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week through an event called “Ghost Out: The Dangers of Distracted Driving.” Spearheaded by KSU’s chapter of Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society, this inaugural event was also hosted by KSU President Daniel S. Papp, Dean of Student Success Michael L. Sanseviro, the Cobb County Fire Department, and others.

The Ghost Out event also featured speakers who had been involved in real distracted driving accidents. The paramedics, firefighters, police officers, and EMT’s were aware of the event but did not know the details of the crash until they arrived. Therefore, they were able to act according to their training and follow standard procedures as if they were responding to a real car crash.

Ghost Out was the signature event for Phi Eta Sigma at KSU during the 2013 fall semester. The event was one element of a successful and productive school year, beginning with a Welcome Back cookout for chapter members. The members also volunteered to help welcome new students to campus at the First-Year Convocation.

Energized to demonstrate a commitment to service, more than seventy chapter members collaborated with students from other honor societies throughout the year for card-making projects to uplift the spirits of deployed troops and local nursing home residents. The chapter also co-sponsored a human-trafficking awareness event and a free GRE test preparation session open to all students. In spring 2014, the chapter hosted a campus-community casino night as a fund-raising activity to benefit St. Jude Children’s Hospital.

Phi Eta Sigma chapter leaders attribute the success of these events to the great amount of member participation and plenty of publicity.

Ghost Out particularly was publicized through numerous outlets: a banner and flyers were posted across campus; OWL Radio announced the event for a month in advance; email announcements were sent to the entire student body; and The Marietta Daily Journal promoted the event.

The success of Ghost Out and the chapter's other programs was a major factor in Phi Eta Sigma being selected for two Golden O's awards from the KSU Department of Student Life for outstanding achievement by a student organization in April 2014. The Program of the Year Award recognizes a student organization that creates an outstanding educational, social, cultural, or performance program or event. The program should serve as an enriching experience for the academic and/or co-curricular lives of KSU community members and should receive a positive response from the KSU community, criteria which certainly apply to the Ghost Out event. The Kennesaw Phi Eta Sigma chapter also received the Golden O's Humanitarian Jewel Service Initiative Award, recognizing a student organization that practices servant leadership and displays a commitment to community service and/or philanthropic initiatives both within and outside the KSU community.

The aim of Ghost Out was to raise awareness of the most common types of distracted driving such as texting, drinking, and talking to passengers while driving. Organizers felt, even if the event prevents only one student from engaging in these practices, it would be worth recreating again next year. Just one student's decision to avoid distracted driving might be the difference between life and death for multiple people. In the end, Ghost Out was so successful that President Papp declared it would become an annual event on KSU's campus.

In response, Phi Eta Sigma chapter leaders made the 2014 event even larger than it was in 2013, but this year the event was called "Owls Arrive Alive." The chapter solicited cooperation and collaboration from more campus honors organizations, student groups, and a few Greek organizations. The KSU Department of Student Wellness, University Police Department, Department of Transportation, Dean of Students, and a few other campus departments and offices helped to coordinate the event. Outside the university, Phi Eta Sigma also partnered with fire departments from two different counties, the local EMS, the county medical examiner, a local wrecker service, and Air Methods (medical helicopter).

As a precursor to the 2014 Owls Arrive Alive, the chapter co-sponsored with the Department of Student Wellness a related event called "OctSober Fest." Held a couple of hours prior to Owls Arrive Alive, this event was a mini-resource fair designed to pique students' interest and connect them with groups whose primary focus is alcohol education and prevention. OctSober Fest helped bring students to Campus Green for Owls Arrive Alive, which featured a rollover crash and a few other changes to the scene setup.

One of the coolest parts of this program was that everyone involved had a genuine interest in the message. No group received compensation for their participation. All of the emergency responders, professional personnel, KSU students, faculty and staff volunteered their time for this important cause.

Phi Eta Sigma at Kennesaw State University continues to grow and increase its activity on campus each year. During the 2013-2014 academic year, the chapter constructed and utilized a new website to allow online registration for new members. The improved recruitment and enrollment efforts yielded another huge induction class for the March 2014 induction and a record number of attendees at the ceremony. The chapter also initiated a new ticket process to keep track of active member participation in events. Today, Phi Eta Sigma is a leading honors organization on campus with hundreds of members and great recognition from the Kennesaw State University community.

Full Circle

Grand Historian

Phi Eta Sigma was founded March 22, 1923, to encourage and reward high scholastic achievement among members of the freshmen classes at the University of Illinois. The values and inspiration that moved the founders of Phi Eta Sigma in the formation of the society exist in today's chapters as well. The academic achievements of college and university students remain a cornerstone for the induction of students into Phi Eta Sigma now in the 21st century.

Kyle Sessions, Grand Historian Emeritus, said in Looking Back: A Seventy-Fifth Anniversary History of Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society (October 1998), that "a few basic principles – dedicated leadership, devotion to students, prudent management, constant improvement in efficiency – all infused with an enthusiastic commitment to service, have served Phi Eta Sigma for more than seven decades" (now more than nine decades) and prepared the Society to function for many more. This leadership starts with our student members. It is their leadership, initiative, character, and perseverance that continue to put Phi Eta Sigma on the map and move us forward. Phi Eta Sigma continues to build on the traditional recognition of academic achievement with new opportunities to develop leadership. This leadership is exemplified at national conventions, which are held every other year.

For some Phi Eta Sigma alumni, their devotion to the honor society does not end when they graduate the university or college where they were inducted. Occasionally a former leader in a student organization has renewed interest in that involvement, and an opportunity arises for giving back to something that impacted that person's life while a leader in college. In other words, a Phi Eta Sigma leader can go "full circle"—from student member to chapter adviser and/or Executive Committee member. A few Phi Eta Sigma alumni members and chapter leaders who have also served as chapter advisers were interviewed for the purpose of this article. Their interviews include advice from these chapter advisers for new inductees today.

Tim Lemper, clinical professor of business law, Kelley School of Business, Indiana University, was a member of the Indiana University chapter, serving as vice president, president, and senior adviser during his undergraduate years. He has been a chapter adviser representative on the national Executive Committee and currently serves as the Grand Vice President on the Committee. He first attended the 2008 National Convention as a faculty adviser and has attended every convention since. Lemper indicates "Phi Eta Sigma is what you make of it." He notes that Phi Eta Sigma was one of the most open and accessible organizations to students when he was an undergraduate student. This meant more than just being open for students to participate, but also encouraging students to take the lead, pursue new activities, try new projects or ideas, and engage with their school and community. He encourages students to become active and to let their chapter become whatever they dare to imagine it could be.

Jeremy Ball, chair and associate professor of criminal justice at Boise State University, was a member of the Indiana University chapter as well. He served as chapter co-senior adviser and attended the Lubbock, Texas, national convention in 1994, where he served as a member of the Nominations Committee. He currently serves as a chapter adviser member on the Executive Committee. The highlight of his undergraduate experience was his first national convention. That experience provided the basis of his advice to new Phi Eta Sigma members, which is "to keep your eyes wide open for all opportunities that may come your way." Had he not taken the opportunity to join Phi Eta Sigma, he may not have maintained a valuable professional and personal relationship with Tim Lemper, as well as the friendship he has developed with his former adviser, Grand President Emeritus John Harrell, a man with a "big heart." Ball states that Phi Eta Sigma was definitely one of those experiences that molded him into the person he is today. He also encourages individuals to reflect on that experience over the years as things are changing so fast. He continues to learn to reflect and to use his reflections in shaping his present and his future.

Dr. Erik Schmeller, assistant dean of the graduate school at Tennessee State University, was a student member of Phi Eta Sigma at Fort Hays State University, graduating in 1991. He attended the 1998 Akron, Ohio, national convention and was his chapter's president and senior adviser. His first opportunity to attend a convention as an adviser was at the Savannah convention in 2004 after the Tennessee State chapter was chartered the previous spring. Schmeller encourages everyone "to record your thoughts and memories now." Like the type of reflection that Ball mentioned, Schmeller recommends keeping a journal as an aid for reflection, regardless of one's age. A journal can also help in preparation for interviews as you reflect on challenges and accomplishments.

Elizabeth Lagowski, director of communications at St. Gregory the Great Parish, was a member of Phi Eta Sigma at the State University of

New York at Buffalo (SUNY Buffalo) and served as interim adviser while the main adviser was on maternity leave. Her first convention was in Albuquerque, New Mexico in 2002 as a student delegate. She was also a Phi Eta Sigma undergraduate scholarship recipient in 2002-2003. Later she attended the 2008 Louisville, Kentucky, convention as the SUNY Buffalo chapter adviser. Lagowski recommends that students "participate as much as they can in Phi Eta Sigma activities and go after leadership positions and scholarships that the organization has to offer." She has yet to be in an interview where she is not asked about her participation in Phi Eta Sigma or that she does not discuss events that demonstrate her experience in working with diverse populations. Lagowski encourages members to engage others in conversation and demonstrate their command of the activities and events that will ultimately assist them in gaining experience that may be useful in future professions and throughout life.

Although Phi Eta Sigma is the same distinguished organization for recognizing and rewarding student achievement it has always been, these individuals acknowledge some significant changes that have occurred in the Society since the time they were active in their chapters as students. Perhaps the most advantageous change for student members is the ever-growing scholarship program. Phi Eta Sigma is able to benefit a larger number of very talented students who are active at the local and national level, providing scholarships of even greater value. Lemper describes Phi Eta Sigma as a "more robust and active organization" now. Lagowski notes that "more and more it seems like technology and the Internet are becoming the main avenue of communication." Phi Eta Sigma continues to evolve and take advantage of new technology.

Another change is the greater impact students have had at the national level, including national conventions. The student delegates continue to conduct the business of the organization at biennial national conventions and are responsible for the decisions regarding the Society's governance. Recently they approved changes to the Constitution and Laws for reorganizing the national office leadership and reassigning responsibilities. This includes the appointment of the Executive Director, who now manages the Founders Fund investments, and the election of national officers and Executive Committee members, who oversee the Society's finances. With these responsible student leadership decisions, the Founders Fund continues to be fiscally sound, allowing the honor society to continue providing the Scholar-Leader of the Year Award, as well as several other undergraduate and graduate awards.

Strong student leadership on the Executive Committee is essential for the honor society. The student representatives who are elected at national conventions develop and implement the convention workshops, where there may be standing room only, to share information and ideas on topics pertaining to chapter growth and personal or professional development. These student leaders usually develop the convention theme, and at times their creativity is seen in their recommendations for artwork, service projects, surveys, social media, and more. The idea of a national philanthropy was the brainchild of student members. As this project has continued to grow after three conventions, we are excited to see what the Society's future holds regarding philanthropy and service.

Many Phi Eta Sigma student members are increasing their involvement in chapter and national leadership, as well as in campus and community service projects and activities. This involvement can lead to their becoming more engaged citizens, a trait that is often lost in college students. Phi Eta Sigma student members are impressive with their skills, insights, and innovations. As the Society continues to empower students to use their skills and knowledge, to get involved in service, and to become life-long learners, those student leaders may also discover they can come "full circle" to impact the lives of other high-achieving students in colleges and universities across the nation.

Scholar-Leader of the Year Expresses Thanks

Carl Kirpes graduated from Iowa State University with honors and bachelor's degrees in both mechanical and industrial engineering. This past year he received a master's degree in systems engineering from Iowa State. He has been recognized as a Tau Beta Pi Laureate and a Rhodes/Marshall Scholarship Finalist, and he was the 2013-2014 Phi Eta Sigma Thomas Arkle

Clark Scholar-Leader of the Year. Active in community service, Carl takes advantage of many opportunities for involvement, from the American Red Cross to Bike MS. He has been a member of Iowa State's varsity football team and has written a novel incorporating his concepts of Reflective Leadership. Below is a note of gratitude from Carl for Phi Eta Sigma's support of his education.

Dear Phi Eta Sigma,

I cannot thank the Society enough for the support it has shown me over the past year. As the Phi Eta Sigma Thomas Arkle Clark Scholar-Leader of the Year, I was able to expand upon my achievements in scholarship, leadership, and service. In addition to furthering my research in applying systems engineering to industry, I also found time to volunteer in my community and receive high marks in all of my courses. I won third place in the Society for Engineering and Management Systems global student paper competition and presented my research "Systems Engineering Application in an Engineering Design Build Firm" at the Institute of Industrial Engineering conference. I will be presenting two more research papers at the conference again this year and received second place in the Construction Division student paper competition. Also active in my community, I found the time to undertake community projects with the Drumm Farm Center for Children, the Wounded Warrior Project, Bike MS, the American Red Cross, and Tour de Hope.

I will be going to work at GENESYS Systems Integrator, an engineering design build company in Kansas City that helps manufacturers produce their products better, faster, safer, and at greater value via business, process, and technology innovation and integration. GENESYS works with a range of clients in the automotive, building products, general industrial, and waste-to-energy market niches. I plan to use the knowledge I gained in my graduate studies to springboard the adoption of systems engineering application in industry and hope to someday "pay it forward" as Phi Eta Sigma has done.

Sincerely,

Carl Kirpes

Forty-second National Convention and Leadership Workshops:

Summary Report

Charleston, South Carolina

October 10-12, 2014

With plenty of sunshine and warm southern breezes, the 2014 Phi Eta Sigma National Convention and Leadership Workshops in Charleston offered its attendees a welcoming atmosphere. The event was hosted by the Embassy Suites Charleston Area Convention Center in North Charleston, the Charleston Convention and Visitors Bureau, and the College of Charleston.

After arriving at the hotel, convention attendees were directed to the spacious convention center for check-in at the Phi Eta Sigma hospitality center, where each person received a customized t-shirt and a drawstring bag containing a convention program, a visitor's guide, and various gift items. Several chapters brought displays featuring their recent activities and achievements, and attendees could view those displays while enjoying some refreshments in the hospitality center. They also visited with Mr. Ken Jernigan, Phi Eta Sigma's membership certificates vendor, and viewed specialized items for sale from Kenneth E. Jernigan and Associates, including Phi Eta Sigma tablecloths and watches.

Also at check-in, thirty-one members signed up to participate in the inaugural Phi Eta Sigma Quiz Bowl, directed by the student members of the Executive Committee. Each team was comprised of student members from different schools. Questions for the event pertained to Phi Eta Sigma and its history, Charleston, WINGS for Kids (the national philanthropy), and pop culture. After elimination rounds, the contest came down to two finalist teams wagering points on a final question in the championship round. Congratulations go to the finalist team of Amna Sohail (IUPUI), Aubrey Murphy (Florida State), and Stephanie Lyon (Brigham Young) for a fine effort and to Quiz Bowl Champions Alex Belisle (Boise State), Nathaniel Ropski (Gannon), and Hannah Williams (Florida State) on their victory. Special thanks goes to the Florida State chapter for furnishing the buzzers used in the competition and for creating the wonderful Quiz Bowl buttons for the champions, finalists, and participants.

Mr. Ken Jernigan displays his wares, including customized Phi Eta Sigma jewelry and the beautifully embroidered tablecloth from Kenneth E. Jernigan and Associates, in the convention hospitality center.

The Executive Committee members are ready to get to work in their meeting just prior to the beginning of the 2014 national convention activities.

Opening Sessions

The Embassy Suites chefs provided a delicious dinner buffet featuring a variety of southern and coastal cuisine, including shrimp and grits. Following dinner, the convention attendees moved to the adjoining ballroom for the opening business session.

Although Grand President Molly Lawrence was absent due to illness, the convention attendees sent their wishes for speedy recovery. In her absence, Grand Vice President Tim Lemper presided and called the convention to order. Mr. Lemper recognized Dr. Glenda Earwood, Executive Director of Alpha Lambda Delta Honor Society, as a special guest for the evening. Past Grand Presidents John Harrell and Jack Sagabiel conducted the first roll call, which is always a pep rally of sorts for chapter members to show their school spirit.

Dr. Trisha Folds-Bennett, dean of the Honors College at the College of Charleston, gave a warm welcome to the group on behalf of the College and the host chapter. Executive Director Elaine Powell then gave an overview of the convention sessions and activities. Next, Mr. Lemper called on members of the Executive Committee to describe the convention committees, which were about to be organized. Other Executive Committee members gave overviews of roundtable discussions they would facilitate for those who did not serve on committees.

When the general session was dismissed, the students and advisers dispersed into small groups. A limited number of student members could serve on the Nominations Committee, and participation on the Constitution and Scholarship Committee was limited to one member per chapter. All other attendees were invited to participate in their choice of three roundtable discussions: Best Practices and Challenges of Large Chapters, Best Practices and Challenges of Small/Medium Chapters, and Promotions and Activities.

The final event of the evening was the Ice Breaker, ice cream social and gift exchange. Attendees built their own ice cream sundaes, swapped customized items brought from their chapters and schools, and made new acquaintances. The Phi Eta Sigma national office staff periodically announced the names of winners to receive several door prizes, and a quartet of student musicians from the College of Charleston provided entertainment featuring Brazilian music during the event.

Saturday Meetings, Workshops, and Awards

After taking advantage of the Embassy Suites hot breakfast buffet, convention attendees assembled for the second general business session. Grand Vice President Lemper asked Executive Committee adviser member Tony Kemp to report on the Founders Fund Scholarship Program. A corresponding PowerPoint presentation featured the recipients of the 2014-2015 Founders Fund scholarships and awards, as well as a graph of the Fund's growth since 1940. Executive Director Elaine Powell gave her biennial report on Society operations and finances.

At the conclusion of the business session, attendees participated in their choice of leadership workshops. Grand Vice President Lemper and the three student members of the Executive Committee conducted four separate workshops directed at student members, each one offered twice. Mr. Lemper (Indiana) presented "The 'WOW FACTOR' in Your Scholarship Application." Sarah Fortney (IUPUI) discussed service project opportunities in "Phi Eta Sigma: Pay It Forward." Jennifer Vuia (Texas A&M) presented "Leaving a Legacy: Building a Strong Chapter." Sean Freeman (Florida State) discussed a new concept for many undergraduate students in "Undergraduate Research/Creative Endeavors." Jeremy Ball (Boise State) and Mary Jo Custer (Syracuse) led the Chapter Advisers workshop, which featured information about the My Honor Society online enrollment system presented by Beth Britton from the national office. The workshop sessions were followed by the continuation of committee meetings and another opportunity for roundtable discussions.

The convention participants then gathered in the dining ballroom for a wonderful "backyard cookout" style luncheon, including burgers, hot dogs, and fried chicken. Highlights of the awards luncheon included recognition of twelve chapters participating in the 2014 convention philanthropy to benefit after-school programs. The student members of the Executive Committee reviewed entries from the chapters describing their fundraising efforts. The group selected the Texas A&M University chapter as recipient of the 2014 Best Philanthropy award. The national philanthropy benefited WINGS for Kids, an after-school program in the Charleston area that serves at-risk elementary school students by helping them develop social and emotional skills. Eleanor Smythe, South Carolina Executive Director for WINGS, represented the organization at the luncheon. The Executive Committee student members presented a check for $5,000 to Ms. Smythe on behalf of the participating chapters and the national Society.

Mr. Lemper then presented leadership plaques to student leaders Sarah Fortney, Sean Freeman, and Jennifer Vuia, who completed their two-year terms on the Executive Committee. The luncheon program also included the presentation of the Society's Distinguished Service Award to four outstanding chapter advisers: N. Bharathan (Indiana University of PA), Heather Hammond (Brigham Young University), Linda Jones (Tarleton State University), and Mary Mahoney (University of Tennessee). Finally, the Phi Eta Sigma national office once again recognized chapters that earned the Society's "Pathways" awards for submitting problem-free membership orders during the previous academic year. A record 129 chapters met the standards for the award, 38 of which were represented at the 2014 convention.

Saturday Tours and Activities

Charleston Convention and Group Services directed the afternoon and evening activities for the Phi Eta Sigma convention group, including a bus tour of historic Charleston with stops at the College of Charleston and the Battery overlooking Charleston Harbor. The entire group gathered on the steps of the U.S. Customs Building for a convention photo before enjoying some free time to shop at the Old City Market and explore surrounding businesses and sights such as the "Four Corners of Law" and Waterfront Park.

As the sun began to set, attendees boarded the buses again for a brief drive to the South Carolina Aquarium. Aquarium staff greeted the group and allowed the attendees to interact with live animals, such as a small alligator. A cocktail-style dinner featuring passed hors d'oeuvres and stations for southern barbecue, gourmet grilled cheese sandwiches, and fresh fruit cobblers allowed guests to have a leisurely meal while viewing the marine life exhibits. During a dive show, Phi Eta Sigma members took self-portraits with one of the divers in the tank who was holding a sign welcoming the honor society group to Charleston. Several members took advantage of the "photo booth" set up by the national office staff, complete with hats, wings, signs, and other black-and-gold props. A lively DJ provided music for many students and even a few advisers to show off their dance moves. After a fun-filled evening, the group returned to the hotel and convention center, where the two standing committees completed their work and prepared their reports for presentation to the convention.

Final Business Session

Grand Vice President Tim Lemper called the convention to order for the final session on Sunday morning. Executive Director Elaine Powell called the roll and determined that a quorum was present.

The first item of business was the report of the Nominations Committee, presented by Jamar Abner (Morgan State University), and the election of national officers and members of the national Executive Committee. Grand President Molly Lawrence (Alabama), Grand Historian Mary Jo Custer (Syracuse), and At-Large Chapter Adviser Member Jeremy Ball (Boise State) were unopposed and were re-elected to 4-year terms on the Committee. Congratulations to the newly-elected student members of the Committee, who will serve 2-year terms and will assist in planning and conducting the 2016 national convention:

- Alex Belisle, Boise State University
- Taylor Bernosky, Monmouth University
- Jamie Weihe, Stephen F. Austin State University

Next was the report of the Constitution and Scholarship Committee, presented by Reginald Jordan (Georgia Southern University). The report described the Committee's discussions regarding proposals for revision of the Constitution and Laws. Most of the proposed revisions would clarify procedures and wording in the document to remove inconsistencies and ambiguities. Another revision regarding the Founders Fund included wording to add undergraduate research in the work to be funded by the scholarship program and removal of "letters of recommendation" from the scholarship criteria. Convention delegates approved all of these proposed revisions.

The Constitution and Scholarship Committee had discussed at length Section 6 regarding the number of undergraduate scholarship applications allowed for submission by each chapter. The Committee proposed and convention delegates voted to approve the following revision of Section 6 of Statute VII:

Nominations of undergraduates for the scholarships and awards are to be made by the local chapters, with the selection committee to include the chapter adviser. Each chapter may nominate at least two persons. Chapters inducting 300 to 599 members in the previous academic year may nominate up to three persons. Chapters inducting more than 599 new members in the previous academic year may nominate one additional person for each increment of 300 new members above 599. (Underlined text shows changes)

Delegate Alex Belisle (Boise State University) made a motion from the floor, seconded by Nathaniel Ropski (Gannon University) to revise Statue VII – The Founders Fund, Section 6, to allow every Phi Eta Sigma chapter to submit up to five undergraduate applications for scholarships each year, regardless of number of inductions. Brittany Rich (Syracuse University) and Members of the Nominations Committee discussed qualifications for Executive Committee members and prepared to interview the candidates. Pictured are (clockwise from lower left) committee adviser Jennifer Vuia (Texas A&M), Ryan Brooks (Pittsburgh-Greensburg), Brent Weaver (Kansas State), Catherine Zisk (Indiana of PA), Cynthia Nkem (Tennessee), Tori Plyler (East Carolina), Riley Gonya (Purdue), Jamar Abner (Morgan State), and adviser Tony Kemp (Mercer).

Grand President Emeriti John Harrell and Jack Sagabiel encouraged Phi Eta Sigma members to show their school spirit as they answered roll call at the opening business session of the 2014 national convention.

Kendra Scholz (Florida State University) spoke in opposition to the motion, and Alex Belisle spoke in support of the motion. The vote was taken by written ballot, and the motion failed. Therefore, the original proposed revision of Section 6 stands as it was approved earlier.

addressed in those sessions. Notes from those discussions were made available online.

After several announcements and closing remarks, the convention was adjourned. The newly formed Executive Committee met briefly to exchange information and take photos, while other convention attendees bid fond farewells. Although the 2014 Phi Eta Sigma national convention came to an end, the chapter leaders who met in Charleston went away with the knowledge they had been a part of history and had made a lasting impact on the future of Phi Eta Sigma.

“Power in Knowledge: Excellence Taking Flight” — 2014 Convention Philanthropy

In 2009-2010 Phi Eta Sigma embarked on a new project encouraging members to become more involved in philanthropic efforts. Students attending national conventions recommended a national philanthropy project to coincide with the theme and location of each national convention. Since the philanthropy element of the national convention was introduced, two programs previously benefited from the efforts of Phi Eta Sigma chapters that accepted the call to action. In 2010, music education in two Knox County, Tennessee, high schools received a $2,000 contribution, and the Utah Schools for the Deaf and the Blind received $5,000 in 2012. The participating chapters were recognized for their work at the Phi Eta Sigma National Convention and Leadership Workshops in 2010 and 2012.

The student members of the 2012-2014 Executive Committee (Sarah Fortney, Jennifer Vuia, and Sean Freeman) researched service programs in the Charleston, South Carolina, area and recommended WINGS for Kids as the beneficiary of the 2014 national convention philanthropy. Serving at-risk elementary school students with an after-school program for more than fifteen years, WINGS provides a way for kids in the Charleston area to develop social and emotional skills. The children are given the foundation to be successful in life and will have the opportunity to live “joyfully, powerfully, and responsibly” after being exposed to this program.

Phi Eta Sigma chapters were asked to participate in this philanthropy effort by conducting fundraising projects that would benefit WINGS and/or after-school programs in their own communities. This year twelve Society chapters participated in the philanthropy efforts. The participating chapters were:

- The University of Alabama
- College of Charleston
- East Carolina University
- The Florida State University
- Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis
- University of Maryland, College Park
- Morgan State University
- University of Pittsburgh at Greensburg
- Texas A&M University
- Virginia Commonwealth University
- University of Wisconsin-Green Bay
- University of Wisconsin-Whitewater

At the Phi Eta Sigma National Convention Awards Luncheon on Saturday, October 11, 2014, the participating chapters were recognized for their efforts. Each chapter that conducted a special philanthropy project in connection with the convention could submit an entry for competition as “Best Philanthropy.” The student members of the Executive Committee selected the entry from Texas A&M University as the 2014 Best Philanthropy. The chapter raised $500 for WINGS and $640 in toys and donated goods for a local charity. The TAMU members accomplished these donations through a creative “Harry Potter” themed banquet and other fundraising events on campus.

luncheon to accept the check for $5,000 from Executive Committee members Sarah Fortney, Sean Freeman, and Jennifer Vuia. Ms. Smythe expressed her deep gratitude on behalf of the students and families served by WINGS for Kids for this generous gift from Phi Eta Sigma.

The Executive Committee will decide on the focus of the 2016 philanthropy at its meeting this summer while making plans for the Forty-third National Convention and Leadership Workshops. The philanthropy focus and the chosen recipient of the philanthropy efforts will be announced in the fall of 2015.

REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR:

THE FORTY-SECOND NATIONAL CONVENTION AND LEADERSHIP WORKSHOPS

by Elaine J. Powell

Charleston, South Carolina
October 10-12, 2014

In compliance with Article VIII of the Constitution and Laws of Phi Eta Sigma (as revised in 2011), the Executive Director “shall serve as Secretary of the Executive Committee and of the Grand Chapter.” In that capacity the Executive Director records actions taken and reports to the Executive Committee and to the Grand Chapter at its biennial national convention.

2012 National Convention and Leadership Workshops

The Forty-first National Convention and Leadership Workshops of Phi Eta Sigma were held October 5-7, 2012, in Salt Lake City, Utah, hosted by the Little America Hotel and the University of Utah and Brigham Young University chapters. At the final business session of the convention, voting delegates elected the following individuals as officers and members of the Executive Committee: Tim Lemper (Indiana)—Grand Vice President; Tony Kemp (Mercer); Christine Boyd (Florida State); Sarah Fortney (IUPUI); Sean Freeman (Florida State); Jennifer Vuia (Texas A&M).

Convention delegates approved the proposal from the Executive Committee and the Finance, Constitution, and Scholarship Committee to increase the national membership fee to $25 per member and increase the amount contributed to the Founders Fund from each membership fee to $5, effective July 1, 2013. The Finance, Constitution, and Scholarship Committee also reported recommendations for consideration by the Executive Committee regarding revisions to the Constitution and Laws of Phi Eta Sigma. The recommendations involved revision of the scholarship criteria, further expansion of the number of scholarship applications to be submitted by larger chapters, and development of a program to subsidize unpaid internships and undergraduate research. [Actions approved by the Executive Committee regarding these recommendations are on the agenda for the 2014 Constitution and Scholarship Committee to present to the full convention for approval.]

Other committee reports addressed issues including communications, marketing and recruitment techniques, fundraising, member involvement, and special chapter events. Convention delegates approved the reports.

Executive Committee

The Executive Committee met just prior to the Forty-first National Convention in October 2012 and again briefly following adjournment of the convention. The Committee then assembled for its off-convention-year workshop on May 30-June 2, 2013, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

In its 2013 business meeting, the Committee approved the annual general fund budget and made plans for the 2014 convention. Since the Future Directions and the Promotions and Activities committees have routinely operated more as workshops, the Committee decided to have only two standing committees for the 2014 convention: the Constitution and Scholarship Committee (limited to one member per chapter) and the Nominations Committee (limited to seven student members whose chapters do not have a candidate running for office, plus two Executive Committee facilitators). Convention attendees who do not serve on either of the standing committees will participate in roundtable discussions during the allotted time for committee meetings. The roundtable discussion options for the 2014 convention will be:

- Promotions and Activities
- Best Practices and Challenges for Large Chapters
- Best Practices and Challenges for Small Chapters

During the 2013 meeting and in subsequent email discussion, the Executive Committee approved nominees for the 2014 Distinguished Service Awards, which will be presented at the Convention Fellowship Luncheon. Committee members also discussed changes in the scholarship application proposed by the scholarship selection committee and expansion of scholarship opportunities. They considered proposed changes to the Constitution and Laws regarding scholarship criteria and submission of applications, and the Committee's actions on these proposals are on the agenda for the 2014 Constitution and Scholarship Committee. Tim Lemper and Jeremy Ball also presented proposed revisions to the Constitution and Laws to eliminate inconsistencies or misleading wording in the document, and the Executive Committee approved adoption of these revisions, which will go before the Constitution and Scholarship Committee for approval at the 2014 national convention.

The Executive Committee learned that the Drexel University chapter was holding its annual induction ceremony during the off-year workshop weekend, and seven Committee members were able to attend a portion of the ceremony and extend greetings from the national Society.

The Executive Committee also met prior to the 2014 convention. Recommendations and actions from the Committee will be channeled to the appropriate convention committees.

The Forum Magazine

The national publication is now available on the Society website. To reduce costs and cut waste for 2014, the national office ordered only the quantities requested by chapters that submitted a Chapter Annual Report, plus an estimated quantity based on the number of inducted members from the previous academic year for those chapters that did not specify a quantity to receive. Copies of the Forum are shipped directly to each chapter from EBSCO Media in Birmingham; the national office does not stock extra copies of the magazine for distribution to chapters. Each Phi Eta Sigma member is entitled to a copy of the magazine. Approximately 25,000 copies of the 2014 Forum were printed and distributed to members.

Communicating with Chapters and Members

Phi Eta Sigma provides a color information brochure to its chapters upon request at no charge. The local printing company produces 100,000 brochures at a time and stores them until such time as the national office requests delivery of a specified quantity.

The chapter adviser newsletter that goes out approximately three times per year is now a color publication that calls attention to various topics of importance to the chapter. The newsletter and accompanying documents are also sent out to advisers via email. Advisers are urged to share news from the national organization with chapter members and to keep the national office advised of their current contact information.

Convention attendees have recommended that more correspondence be sent out to chapters through electronic media. The national office staff is requesting that all advisers provide an email address for more efficient and cost effective communications. Also, the Society website was completely redesigned in 2013-2014 to allow for quicker and easier updates to share important events, deadlines, and news from chapters. The redesigned website allows for convenient user interaction and merchant services for chapter orders of memberships and merchandise.

In addition to the website, Phi Eta Sigma also uses social media to communicate with members and advisers. Chapter members are encouraged to visit the Society's pages on Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn to view news and information provided by the national office and to post news and photos from their local chapters.

New Chapters

Since the 2012 National Convention in Salt Lake City, three new chapters have been installed. Those chapters are:

Chapter No.	Name of Chapter	Chartering Date
376	Clark Atlanta University	March 20, 2013
377	Robert Morris University Illinois	June 6, 2013
378	McKendree University	April 24, 2014

The Phi Eta Sigma national office currently has scheduled the rechartering of two inactive chapters during the 2014-2015 academic year and is corresponding with two other institutions regarding rechartering.

New Initiates

Each year Phi Eta Sigma chapters across the U.S. induct academically motivated students who excel in their studies during the first year of their full-time undergraduate coursework. All chapters are urged to make concerted efforts toward identifying and recruiting eligible lower division students for membership.

Stimulating programs aimed at leadership and academic development, service projects and volunteerism, and worthwhile social activities will attract high achieving students. Chapters are also urged to keep the local membership fee as low as possible so no student will decline the invitation for induction because the cost is beyond his or her resources.

The annual number of students initiated has increased more than tenfold over the years since the honor society was established in 1923. The list below shows a sampling of the induction figures since that time, including the annual inductions over the past five years:

Year	No. of Members
1923-1925	232
1949-1950	2818
1974-1975	11,873
1989-1990	23,720
1999-2000	32,399
2009-2010	28,374
2010-2011	30,885
2011-2012	30,456
2012-2013	30,482
2013-2014	28,505
Cumulative Total (1923-2014):	1,146,141

Financial Report

Phi Eta Sigma operates with two financial account classifications. These are the General Fund for the Society's day-to-day operations and the Founders Fund for scholarship purposes. Every year a Certified Public Accountant conducts a complete audit of these funds, and the Forum magazine publishes reports of the Society's financial condition generated from that audit.

The $25 induction fee for each member is deposited in the General Fund. No nationally certified honor society has a lower induction fee. A portion of each induction fee ($5) is earmarked for deposit in the Founders Fund.

A brief summary of the Society's financial condition as of June 30, 2014, is printed in this issue of the FORUM OF PHI ETA SIGMA.*

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARDS CHRONICLED

The Phi Eta Sigma Distinguished Service Award was established by the Sixteenth National Convention hosted by Indiana University on December 6-8, 1962. The first recipients were recognized during the Seventeenth National Convention hosted by the University of Illinois in 1964.

Members, chapter advisers, Executive Committee members, or national office staff members of Phi Eta Sigma who have given loyal and devoted service to the Society for a period of not less than five years may be recognized with the Distinguished Service Award, to be presented at the National Convention.

Since the founding of the award, eighty-seven individuals have been recognized for their devotion to honors leadership. Past recipients attending the Forty-second National Convention in Charleston include: John Harrell, Jack Sagabiel, Christine Boyd, Mary Jo Custer, Susan Melson Huffman, Lisa Ruch, Tony Kemp, Kerry Holzworth, Golam Mathbor, and Ria Butts.

The following citations were read as four additional individuals were presented the Distinguished Service Award on October 11, 2014.

CITATION: MARY MAHONEY UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE

Mary Mahoney is the assistant director of Career Services at The University of Tennessee-Knoxville. She is also a graduate of The University of Tennessee and is a proud Volunteer.

Mary has served as the Phi Eta Sigma adviser at UT since 2001. During her tenure, the chapter has continued to see growth, hold regular meetings, and become more involved in community service projects. Over the years, officers of the chapter have regularly attended national conventions, and several chapter members have received national scholarships. Mary also provided the leadership for the UT chapter to host the 40th national convention in 2010.

In her position with Career Services at UT, Mary oversees the day-to-day operations of the on-campus recruiting program, including presenting workshops and counseling on areas relating to the job search process. In her more than twenty-five years with Career Services, she has presented numerous workshops for the university, businesses, and organizations in the Knoxville community and at various conferences. Her workshops have covered topics such as Business and Dining Etiquette, Professional Presence, Resume Writing, How to Interview, and Networking. In addition she has taught classes at the University in Job Seeking Skills for Non-Technical Majors and Entering the Real World: Making the Transition from Collegiate Athletics.

The Phi Eta Sigma Executive Committee unanimously approved Ms. Mahoney for this award. The Forty-second National Convention of Phi Eta Sigma congratulates Ms. Mary Mahoney as a 2014 recipient of the Society's Distinguished Service Award.

CITATION: NARAYANASWAMY BHARATHAN
INDIANA UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

Dr. N. Bharathan is the adviser of the Indiana University of Pennsylvania (IUP) chapter of Phi Eta Sigma that he chartered in 1999. A professor of cell molecular biology and current chair of the department of biology, he has been a team leader and co-principal investigator of several multi-million dollar research and training projects funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF), National Guard Bureau (NGB), and the Department of Homeland Security. Since 2009, Dr. Bharathan has served as a principal investigator in a “Microbial Forensics in Biodefense Project” funded by the Defense Threat Reduction Agency. Many of his students working on these projects have been active Phi Eta Sigma members, some of whom have gone on to pursue doctoral degrees at premier schools like Harvard and Johns Hopkins.

Dr. Bharathan’s leadership and creativity have been outstanding for the local chapter. He has been crucial in recruiting new members and has provided guidance for the chapter to develop a website, to produce a local newsletter, and most notably to create a point system of scoring for student scholarship and service activities on the IUP campus. Under his leadership the chapter has grown and become more dynamic both at the local and national levels. Over sixty IUP students have received more than $92,000 in national and local scholarships since 1999. The student members under his leadership have initiated or been involved in numerous local, regional, and international projects.

In her nomination letter, IUP chapter president and Founders Fund scholarship recipient Hannah Cornman notes that through Phi Eta Sigma Dr. Bharathan “has had a positive impact on personal, attitudinal, moral, social, and cognitive outcomes of students on the IUP campus.” With his strong commitment to excellence in research, teaching, and service, Dr. Bharathan continues to impact the lives of students at IUP, as well as those in the military who serve our country.

The Phi Eta Sigma Executive Committee unanimously approved Dr. Bharathan for this award. The Forty-second National Convention of Phi Eta Sigma congratulates Dr. N. Bharathan as a 2014 recipient of the Society’s Distinguished Service Award.

CITATION: HEATHER HAMMOND
BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY

Heather Hammond has worked as an administrator at Brigham Young University for seventeen years and has served as the Phi Eta Sigma adviser for the past six years. Although the chapter was established in 1947, it has experienced periods of inactivity due to inconsistencies in leadership. However, in 2008 the Phi Eta Sigma chapter came under the stewardship of the Office of First-Year Experience when Heather became assistant dean and chapter adviser.

Under her direction, the BYU chapter has grown tremendously, a full student leadership council has been established, annual memberships have more than doubled, the chapter now holds activities at least once a month, a faculty recognition program was established, and several members of the chapter leadership regularly attend the national convention. In 2012 Heather provided the leadership for the BYU chapter to host the Forty-first National Convention and Leadership Workshops held in Salt Lake City.

In addition to advising the Phi Eta Sigma chapter, Heather also directs orientation events for more than 7,000 new students each year. Because of this affiliation, Heather has been able to provide Phi Eta Sigma members opportunities to serve new students at orientation events including group leaders, logistical support, and most recently as guides in the chapter's newest and largest activity: the "class schedule walkthrough," in which chapter members wear their Phi Eta Sigma t-shirts and sunglasses and volunteer to take students one-on-one through their class schedules—locating all of their classrooms and giving tips along the way.

The Phi Eta Sigma Executive Committee unanimously approved Ms. Hammond for this award. The Forty-second National Convention of Phi Eta Sigma congratulates Ms. Heather Hammond as a 2014 recipient of the Society's Distinguished Service Award.

CITATION: LINDA MORGAN JONES TARLETON STATE UNIVERSITY

Dr. Linda Morgan Jones became adviser for the Tarleton State University chapter of Phi Eta Sigma in 1996. A professor in Human Sciences and very recently retired Dean of Graduate Studies, Dr. Jones liked to tease that she identified future graduate students in their freshman year on induction day. Dr. Jones became chapter adviser under the tutelage of Grand President Emeritus Dr. B.J. Alexander, during her assignment at Tarleton State as his Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs.

As faculty adviser, Dr. Jones encouraged the chapter leaders to broaden their influence on campus and to promote camaraderie and connections by partnering with other service organizations in projects and events. Among successful and annually repeated events were Freshman Move-in Day and Freshman Transition week, in which members work as student counselors during events and registrations. Other philanthropic activities include a community Angel Tree, a drive to provide Christmas gifts for community children. A unique service example was the chapter members' response as volunteers with the TREAT Rodeo (TREAT being an acronym for Tarleton Equine Assisted Therapy) for children and adults with physical and other disabilities.

The chapter's annual induction ceremony and dinner is always a highlight as family and friends are guests for the event. Under Dr. Jones's leadership, the Tarleton State chapter has enjoyed recognition at our biennial national conventions, having members serving on national committees and one student, Shayla Priddy, elected to the national Executive Committee.

The Phi Eta Sigma Executive Committee unanimously approved Dr. Jones for this award. The Forty-second National Convention of Phi Eta Sigma congratulates Dr. Linda Jones as a 2014 recipient of the Society's Distinguished Service Award.
